DRIVE-IN THEATERS have enjoyed a resurgence since last spring as the COVID-19 pandemic forced folks to find forms of entertainment that didn't risk their health. Even before that, drive-ins were thriving in Texas, as we wrote about in Drive in, Chill Out in June 2019.

Can-Do Perspective

Recycling one aluminum can saves enough energy to run a 14-watt CFL for 20 hours, a computer for three hours or a TV for two hours.

Storm Surge

A record 30 named storms formed in the Atlantic Ocean in 2020. Thirteen of those named storms turned into hurricanes, and three of them—Hanna, Laura and Delta—brought high winds or heavy rain or both to Texas, which mobilized lineworkers across the state. See 'That's What Co-ops Are For' on Page 8.

As the planet warms, scientists say, hurricanes are lingering longer and staying stronger once they make landfall.

Alas, hurricane season begins again June 1 and runs through November.

Heavy Metal

THE LARGEST PLAYABLE GUITAR in the world is 43½ feet tall, 16½ feet wide and weighs 1 ton, according to Guinness World Records. Built by students from the Conroe Independent School District Academy of Science and Technology, it's modeled on a 1967 Gibson Flying V and was first played in June 2000 with the opening chord of A Hard Day's Night.

A CAREER TAKES OFF

Nothing is cooler for an aspiring writer than to see her work in print for the first time.

Ainsley Shaw gets that thrill this month with the publication of Queen Bess Soared on Page 29.

Shaw is a first-year student at Maastricht University in the Netherlands, but she began writing about Bessie Coleman, the Texan who became the first African American woman and first Native American woman to earn a pilot's license, in 2020, when she was a senior at Leander High School.

Shaw, a Pedernales Electric Cooperative member, participated in the Leander school district's Career Opportunities on Location week by shadowing the staff at Texas Co-op Power. "Being in a real writing environment has only reinforced my intention to pursue writing as a career," she said of her COOL experience.

WALKING THE LINES

WHEN FEBRUARY'S polar vortex brought to Texas enough snow, ice, cold and wind to strain every bit of infrastructure, Cody Hansen, a Bandera Electric Cooperative lineworker, parked his bucket truck on the side of a Hill Country road. He was hoofing it.

"The roads were super snowed over. Then instead of patches of black ice, we had all black ice," he said. "It's a lot more difficult when you have to walk the lines out and try not to break an ankle."

Bandera EC and many of the state's 65 other distribution cooperatives supplied line crews with foul-weather gear—even if they couldn't supply their homes with power—and the lineworkers in turn restored power to millions between grid-mandated rolling outages. Those workers faced fender benders, exhausting conditions and 12-plus-hour shifts as they knocked ice from poles and hammered at frozen gates and chains to keep power flowing to co-op members.

But for many, the work wasn't done when their lights were back on. Not when others still needed help.

About a dozen co-ops sent workers to other cooperatives after ice broke thousands of poles across Co-op Country and residential heating demand overwhelmed other electrical equipment, stretching thin co-ops and crews.

"When our system was on the ground and members were without power, it was reassuring to know we had support from our co-op family," said Kathi Calvert, general manager at Houston County EC.

Borne out of hardship and guided by the Seven Cooperative Principles, including Cooperation Among Cooperatives, Texas' electric co-ops worked together, helped along by the very members they serve, to do what they've always done.

"Our crews in the field were constantly stuck and having to be pulled around due to the icy conditions," said Bryan Chandler, operations manager at Heart of Texas EC. "Our members came to our aid with food, fuel and tractors to help pull trucks."

It took everyone working cooperatively.

"This was definitely the worst winter storm I have worked in," said Doug Grimm, a 20-year linework veteran for Bluebonnet EC. "We did what we always do: Come together and get the job done." ■

'THAT'S WHAT CO-OPS ARE FOR'

BY CHRIS BURROWS

THREE MONTHS OF HISTORIC WEATHER IN 2020 UNLEASHED THE FULL FORCE OF TEXAS' CO-OP FAMILY

IT wasn't the 16-hour days or the searing heat. It wasn't the meager accommodations—a 100-man tent—or the fact that he'd had only five days off in seven weeks. Speaking from a mud-caked work truck in southwest Louisiana, James Warden didn't bring up any of those things.

"The hardest part is being away from home," Warden said. He had just missed his youngest son's eighth birthday. "When I'm working at home, I still get to see my kids and wife when I come in late at night. I at least get to kiss 'em good night, but here it's just a phone call."

The construction foreman for Deep East Texas Electric Cooperative was five days into his second trip in about a month to DeRidder, Louisiana, where he was helping an electric co-op severely damaged by hurricanes Laura and Delta. It was mid-October 2020, and Warden's crew, based out of San Augustine in East Texas, was setting poles and hanging lines, some of which they'd already reset and rehung weeks before, following Laura. That hurricane knocked out power to Warden's own home and heavily damaged his own co-op's lines.

But the day after the lights were back on in East Texas, Warden was in Louisiana. He left his own family to help another family—the co-op family.

In his 24 years as a lineworker, Warden has worked the front lines of major recovery efforts, including after hurricanes Katrina and Rita. But he had never experienced anything like this. He'd never had to miss one of his four kids' birthdays.

"When we first got here, there weren't hardly any lines up in the air," he said. "Their whole system was tore up. It was just wiped. When you drove down the highway, just about every pole you would look at was broke."

Co-ops follow the Seven Cooperative Principles, including Cooperation Among Cooperatives, through which they seek aid from and offer assistance to fellow co-ops during times of crisis.

‘EVERY TIME WE HAVE A STORM AT HOME AND IT GETS REAL BAD, PEOPLE VOLUNTEER TO COME HELP US. BEING A LINEMAN, WHAT YOU’RE SUPPOSED TO DO IS GO HELP PEOPLE.’

Relentlessly dedicated lineworkers like Warden have for more than 80 years ensured that the lights stay on across Co-op Country, where cooperatives rely on one another when disaster strikes. The full force of that network was on brilliant display last fall, when Laura in August, Hurricane Sally in September and Delta in October ripped through the South, including parts of Texas, killing dozens, displacing many more and destroying electrical infrastructure. And then an unprecedented ice storm tore apart co-op grids in West Texas and the Panhandle.

By the end of last October, lineworkers from every part of Texas had helped restore power for more than a quarter-million co-op members in Texas, Louisiana and Alabama—resetting thousands of poles along hundreds of miles.

But lineworkers like Ben Perry don’t measure progress in miles or meters. They measure it in relieved faces.

“That’s probably what will stick with me the most—the people that were there, the hospitality,” said Perry, a foreman for United Cooperative Services, a co-op based south of Fort Worth. Perry, like Warden, was part of a crew dispatched to Louisiana to help Beauregard EC, whose entire electrical system was taken offline by Laura—the strongest recorded hurricane to ever make landfall in Louisiana. The Category 4 storm killed 77 after it made landfall August 27, 2020, packing 150 mph winds.

Laura dealt serious damage to several Texas co-ops but decimated Beauregard EC, prompting a call for help that drew more than 1,200 lineworkers from across the South and Midwest, including Warden and Perry, for a massive monthslong power restoration effort. “We really couldn’t do it without them,” said Danielle Tilley, communications specialist at Beauregard EC.

“The devastation from that storm was unreal,” said Brad Morrow, another United lineworker. “It seemed like everywhere you drove, there were trees and debris, and any sort of house or building was destroyed.”

Twenty Texas co-ops sent help to Jasper-Newton EC, where 90% of that East Texas co-op’s 22,900 members had no power. General Manager Mark Tamplin was grateful. “Assistance from other cooperatives was extremely critical to the restoration effort,” he said.

“Every time we have a storm at home and it gets real bad, people volunteer to come help us,” Warden said. “Being a lineman, what you’re supposed to do is go help people.”

Cooperation Among Cooperatives, one of the Seven Cooperative Principles that guide all co-ops, ensures that help is just a phone call away when any co-op anywhere needs it.

“Whenever they call us, we’re obligated to go help because there’ll be times in the future when I know we’ll need help,” Perry said. “That’s just what you do.”

Tate Glasscock knows firsthand.

The foreman at Lighthouse EC, based in the Texas Panhandle, also made the trip east after Laura’s onslaught, driving eight hours to spend 10 days helping Jasper-Newton EC.

From August through October, Texas lineworkers faced sweltering and then arctic conditions after hurricanes in the Gulf and an ice storm in West Texas and the Panhandle devastated co-ops' infrastructure.

"That's what co-ops are for—to help each other," Glasscock said.

Just a few weeks after returning from East Texas, Glasscock's own co-op was hit by a devastating ice storm that snapped upward of 3,700 power poles and knocked offline more than 63,000 meters across 15-plus cooperatives in West Texas and the Panhandle. The October storm coated power lines with half-inch-thick ice, which can add 500 pounds to a single span of line, toppling crossarms, lines and poles across sparse stretches of plains.

Help poured in to the co-ops affected by the ice, which a South Plains EC spokesperson called "the most devastating storm we've had in 20 years"; Lighthouse EC general manager Albert Daniel said was "the worst storm to ever hit Lighthouse by all recollections"; and Lyntegar EC called "likely the largest single outage event ... in the history of the cooperative."

Suddenly Glasscock and many fellow first responders were the ones in need of help after they just provided it.

"In my nearly 20-year career, I've never seen anything this detrimental to our system," Glasscock said. "Most of the time it's in one specific area. This was our whole system."

United lineworkers Perry and Morrow headed west, just weeks after their tireless work out east, joining a major rebuilding effort in the Panhandle.

"Just seeing those guys roll through the gates, I thought, 'Man, we've got help,'" Glasscock said. "I knew we were in good shape then."

Progress was much slower in the Panhandle, where homes can be separated by miles.

"I believe the first day that we went out, there were 13 or 14 poles that were on the ground that fed one house," Morrow said. "In Louisiana that might have gotten 30, 40, 50 people on, if not more." But the payoff was no different. "The relief in people's eyes and the joy that they experience is the same."

Between the hurricanes and ice storm, Perry spent about three weeks away from his family over the course of about two months. "I don't know that I'll ever forget this year," said Perry, a 16-year line work veteran. "This has been one of the craziest years that I've been a part of in this work."

Those in need kept him going. That was just as true this past February, when co-op members supported crews through an unprecedented polar vortex. Dangerous roads, iced-over lines and poles, and grid-mandated outages made lineworkers' jobs even more challenging.

"There was the normal fatigue that comes from working so many 12-hour days in a row, but sometimes that was compounded by coming home to a cold house," said Kendal Fiebrich, a Bluebonnet EC lineworker.

Sympathetic members lent support online and in the field—like a woman in Moss Bluff, Louisiana. She cooked up a meal of gumbo "and any kind of Louisiana fixin's you could think of," Morrow said, for linemen from Texas and Missouri who restored her power after weeks of living off a generator.

Strangers united by the co-op family.

"It's the people who make it worthwhile," Morrow said. "You'll never find someone more thankful and willing to help you when you're there to help them." ■ likes to sit where he can see everyone in the room and who's walking through the door. He leads me to the corner of a long table at the back of a pandemic-emptied Masonic Lodge in Leander and chooses a seat with a clear view of the entrance. He wears an Air Force cap and a sky-blue Mason's shirt embroidered with "N. Hollywood," each emblematic of the twists and turns of his prolific career.

Attention to wardrobe figured into Hinkle's duties as unofficial technical adviser on the West Texas and Panhandle sets of Giant and Hud, two better-known entries in the catalog of midcentury Texas cinema. When costume design choices went awry—a hat that wasn't creased correctly or was impractical for work, jeans too short for horseback riding—he would issue a concise verdict: "A Texan wouldn't wear that," then figure out a fix.

That was just one duty on two projects over an entertainment career that spanned decades and comprised a raft of roles: stuntman, actor, writer, producer, director and Texas talk man, as Giant director George Stevens dubbed him.

Hinkle's preference for an unobstructed view isn't surprising, either. A few years before he coached Hollywood luminaries Rock Hudson, Elizabeth Taylor and Paul Newman on the nuances of a type of Texas dialect—leaving the "g" off words like "walking" and emphasizing r's when they ended a word such as "mother" or "father"—he enjoyed an embarrassment of bird's-eye views.

Born and raised in the South Plains of Texas, Hinkle left high school in 1947 to join the Air Force at 17 after securing a promise from a recruiter that he could continue his education while enlisted. "Nobody in my family ever had a high school diploma," he says. After earning that credential, he spent several months in Europe working on a crew that flew coal from Frankfurt to Berlin.

On one trip, the co-pilot had a heart attack midflight. Hinkle took over co-pilot duties for the rest of the round trip, thanks to the private pilot's license he'd earned at 16.

While stationed overseas, Hinkle's first stop in Vienna was to board the Riesenrad, a 212-foot-tall Ferris wheel. It was a precursor to a ride he'd take a few years later, on a Ferris wheel much closer to home, with his good friend James Dean.

Not bad for a kid from Brownfield who didn't officially exist on paper until his 20s.

The country doctor who attended Hinkle's birth on an unelectrified Terry County ranch in 1930 misrecorded his first name as "Bobbie." It didn't get corrected until some 22 years later, when Hinkle went to the courthouse with his aunt and uncle in tow to vouch for his identity. Today, the nonagenarian takes that misnomer in stride, along with the doctor's weeklong delay in recording his birth on the county rolls. "That old doctor," he says, not unkindly. "At least he got me here."

Hinkle's family followed the crops around for work for a time after his birth. "We were poor," he says. "They were poor people.” After the military and before setting out for Hollywood, Hinkle worked as a weekend rodeo cowboy and in construction, among other jobs. His 12-hour shifts in a West Texas oil field in 1950 and 1951 earned him $1.76 an hour and, years later, a foothold in a conversation with Howard Hughes, the manufacturing scion and film producer.

An uncredited role in a 1956 film, The First Traveling Saleslady, led to a chance meeting of the two Texas transplants in Hollywood. After being instructed by the director to all but pretend not to even see Hughes as he visited the set, Hinkle was wrangled into meeting him anyway when the film's star, Ginger Rogers, walked him over. The inventor didn't offer to shake hands, Hinkle says, but the two quickly found common ground: Much to the magnate's approval, the drill bits the supporting player had used in his oil field days were manufactured by Hughes Tool Company.

During Giant's 1955 production, Hinkle, James Dean and Elizabeth Taylor, along with a handful of other cast and crew members, repaired to Dallas over the Fourth of July weekend, all because the famously violet-eyed star couldn't resist the siren song of Neiman Marcus. Hinkle called the luxury retailer and dropped a few names. Stanley Marcus, the store's owner, not only agreed to allow the group entry to the store on a Sunday, when it would typically be closed, but also sent a plane to Marfa to whisk the group to Love Field.

After being feted by Dallas society in Stanley and Billie Marcus' Highland Park mansion, Hinkle, Taylor and Dean embarked on their shopping excursion, followed by an outing to an offseason Fair Park, home to the state fair, where they rode a rickety wooden roller coaster, sampled carnival fare, played midway games and boarded the soaring Texas Star.

The lighthearted weekend contrasted with Dean's intense focus on getting the part of Jett Rink, the anti-hero of Giant, just right.

“He told me, the day I met him, ‘I want you to help me be a Texan 24 hours a day,’” Hinkle says. During filming, the pair grew close as the dialogue coach modeled Texan sensibilities for Dean. They shared meals, pulled pranks and hunted rabbits together. “He was like a brother,” Hinkle says, “just like I was raised with him there in Brownfield.”

Hinkle says Dean wasn't a big star then, having only one film credit at the time. But his commitment to his craft and his precision in shaping a character in the likeness of his mentor precipitated a friendship.

“He was so dedicated,” says Hinkle, a Pedernales Electric Cooperative member. “He wanted to be with me all the time. Because he wanted to be a Texan. I mean, he watched everything I did and everything I said, watched every person that I met, how I met 'em and things like that, and he just studied it.”

That osmosis translated to the screen. Dean received a posthumous Oscar nomination for the role, which came as no surprise to his grieving friend.

“He could have played Giant a different way, you know,” Hinkle says. “He wanted to play him just as an old down and out cowboy, didn't have anything and didn't figure he'd ever have anything, except a dream.”

After filming of Giant ended, Dean gave a replica Oscar to Hinkle, inscribed with his name, to thank him for creating the character.

Back at the Masonic Lodge, the afternoon unspools. Just before he tells me about recruiting Buddy Holly to headline a car-selling telethon starring Western character actor Chill Wills, strains of El Paso fill the room. It's Hinkle's iPhone ring tone. His eyes crinkle. “That's Marty Robbins,” he says. “I managed him for 14 years.”

Looking back on his half-century career, spanning roles from cowboy stuntman to mentor to manager and many points in between, I ask if there's anything he'd change.

“No,” he says. “I'd just love to do it again. I've had a lot of rough times and things—boy, I'd take them right along with the good ones, if I could just do it one more time.” ■

30+ Years of Purity: 2021 Silver Maple Leafs Now Available

First issued more than 30 years ago, the Canadian Silver Maple Leaf has become one of the world's premier silver bullion coins. Millions are struck each year and are quickly secured by both collectors and silver buyers. They are second only to the U.S. Silver Eagle in terms of unit sales, but are superior in terms of purity, legal-tender value and security.

This year's mintage of freshly struck One-Ounce Silver Maple Leaf coins has just been released, meaning NOW is the time to secure yours at an incredible price!

One of the World's Purest Silver Coins — Guaranteed

The Canadian Silver Maple Leaf is one of the world's purest silver coins, struck in a full Troy ounce of 99.99% ("four nines") pure silver. As an official legal-tender coin with a face value of $5 Canadian, its content and purity come guaranteed by the Canadian Government. By contrast, the U.S. Silver Eagle is only struck in 99.9% purity and carries a $1 U.S. legal-tender value.

Iconic Maple Leaf Design

Take one look at this coin, and you know exactly where it was created. The reverse features an iconic design featuring a single sugar maple leaf, the national symbol of Canada. This lifelike design features superior texture and detail, and comes surrounded by a vivid burst of radial lines—lines that serve a dual function...

Advanced Security Features

In addition to its high purity, the Silver Maple Leaf boasts special security features, such as laser-engraved radial lines and a small micro-engraved maple leaf, that make it nearly impossible to forge. It's not just one of the world's purest silver coins, but also one of its most secure—an important benefit for silver buyers.

Reputation Matters

THE BEST SOURCE FOR COINS WORLDWIDE™

SACRED STONE OF THE SOUTHWEST IS ON THE BRINK OF EXTINCTION

Centuries ago, Persians, Tibetans and Mayans considered turquoise a gemstone of the heavens, believing the striking blue stones were sacred pieces of sky. Today, the rarest and most valuable turquoise is found in the American Southwest—but the future of the blue beauty is unclear.

On a recent trip to Tucson, we spoke with fourth generation turquoise traders who explained that less than five percent of turquoise mined worldwide can be set into jewelry and only about twenty mines in the Southwest supply gem-quality turquoise. Once a thriving industry, many Southwest mines have run dry and are now closed.

We found a limited supply of turquoise from Arizona and snatched it up for our Sedona Turquoise Collection. Inspired by the work of those ancient craftsmen and designed to showcase the exceptional blue stone, each stabilized vibrant cabochon features a unique, one-of-a-kind matrix surrounded in Bali metalwork. You could drop over $1,200 on a turquoise pendant, or you could secure 26 carats of genuine Arizona turquoise for just $99.

Your satisfaction is 100% guaranteed. If you aren't completely happy with your purchase, send it back within 30 days for a complete refund of the item price.

The supply of Arizona turquoise is limited, don't miss your chance to own the Southwest's brilliant blue treasure. Call today!

MESSAGE
FROM PRESIDENT/

SCHRIVER

We are in this Together

IN MAY, WE UPDATED YOU on the information we gathered and facts we learned through the Brazos Electric Power Cooperative, Inc. (Brazos) Bankruptcy process. As a reminder, Brazos, our generation and transmission cooperative, commenced a Chapter 11 Bankruptcy case on March 1, 2021, in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Texas. You may recall that we previously described this situation as very fluid and far from over – and unfortunately, that is still the case today.

As additional hearings are conducted and more documents are filed in the bankruptcy court, we continue to have concerns on the outcome. As of this writing, some important hearings and filings are approaching, and we are actively working with our legal counsel and consultants to be sure the membership of Tri-County Electric Cooperative is represented to the best of our ability. While this is a problem not of our making, our primary goal is to protect you, our members. We will continue to keep you updated as the bankruptcy process develops. 169400001

Although we are keenly focused on the Brazos bankruptcy and the associated effects it could have on Tri-County Electric Co-op, your board of directors and staff are committed to making sure we continue to serve your day-to-day needs at the level you deserve and expect. The Texas summer is upon us and with that comes higher temperatures and higher demand for electricity. The Electric Reliability Council of Texas (ERCOT) is predicting a hot summer and we are taking steps to protect our membership from potentially high prices. Over the past several months, Tri-County Electric Co-op has been working with Brazos to purchase hedges in the form of physical energy products, on top of Brazos-owned generation assets, to help protect our members from the price volatility of the ERCOT market. The board has approved a hedging plan through September 2021 and staff is currently working on a plan for the remainder of the year.

That being said, it is always a good idea to conserve energy where you can and ensure you are using energy in the most efficient manner. While the price of electricity has not changed much over the years, it will continue to increase. We have numerous energy efficiency tips online, an online energy audit tool and a rebate program available to assist you in using energy wisely. The Home Energy Adventure takes you throughout your home to see just how energy efficient you are. These resources can be found on our website at tcectexas.com under Energy Solutions. Through our partnership with Touchstone Energy Cooperatives, we have access to even more energy-saving tips. To start saving energy, visit touchstoneenergy.com/efficiency. Touchstone Energy even has a DIY section to help you through your home projects. Additionally, I encourage you to follow us on Facebook @ TCECTexas as we use this platform to communicate with our membership on a real-time basis. 800762515

In closing, I would like to acknowledge and give appreciation to your Tri-County Electric Co-op Board of Directors, including our two newest directors, Margaret Koprek and Kevin Ingle. Mrs. Koprek and Mr. Ingle were both appointed in February 2021 to fill vacancies on the board, and they have hit the ground running. Their academic and professional backgrounds, coupled with their strong business acumen, positioned them well to be integral members of our board. This past year has been tough, but the cooperative business model was founded on the basis of solving a problem and bringing a sustainable solution to our communities. We will continue to build on our heritage as we lead this organization with the focus on you, our member-owners. We are in this together. ■

2021 Director Elections

THE COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS met on Monday, April 19, 2021, to review and accept applications from members seeking nomination to the board of directors through member petition. 800859866

The petition candidate slate is presented by the Committee on Nominations and Qualifications based on the eligibility of members who submitted application packets to seek nomination by 5 pm on Thursday, April 15, 2021. Committee members are Steve Bartley, District 3; Randy Marshall, District 4; Ramey Keeth, District 5; Danny Tuggle, District 6; Ranell Scott, District 7; Lesley Boone, District 8; Robert Gotcher - chairman, District 9

The committee approved one petition candidate seeking nomination and approved the official 2021 election ballot as follows:

District 3

Jorden Wood (Incumbent)

District 6

John Killough (Incumbent)

District 8

Jarrett Armstrong (Incumbent)

Michael Sivertsen

Rick Barnes (Petitioning Candidate)

2021 Official Election

Each year, three director seats are up for election by the membership. In 2021, director districts 3, 6 and 8 are up for election. While directors are nominated by members of their district, the entire membership votes on directors during the official election.

Members can expect their official 2021 election ballot on the September Texas Co-op Power. Voting will open Wednesday, September 1, and members have the option to vote electronically or by mail. Tri-County Electric Co-op is partnering again this year with Survey and Ballot Systems, a third-party election service, to conduct the election. Survey and Ballot Systems will assist with ballot creation and administer all aspects of the election.

Watch your Texas Co-op Power magazine for more information regarding the director candidates, the election and Annual Meeting details. ■

Tri-County Electric Cooperative has partnered with AirMedCare Network (AMCN) to offer you the opportunity to join our membership program at a special rate of just $65 per year!

Expenses for emergency air medical transport can put stress on your finances. With an AMCN membership—America's largest air medical membership network—you will have no out-of-pocket expenses if flown by an AMCN provider.

2021 Scholarship Recipients

BY ANNIE MCGINNIS, DIRECTOR OF COMMUNICATIONS

TRI-COUNTY ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE is excited to announce the 2021 scholarship recipients. This year, we are proud to award eight $4,000 scholarships and eight $2,000 scholarships to seniors headed to college or trade school.

As the scholarship administrator for the co-op, I would like to thank the 223 applicants who took the time to submit excellent applications. Our selection committee reviewed each application carefully. After more than two hours of deliberation, the committee selected the 16 recipients. I am proud to say that we have intelligent, well-rounded young adults in our communities who have bright futures. Congratulations to the class of 2021!

Tri-County Electric Co-op is delighted to award scholarships to the following students:

$4,000 Scholarship Recipients

- Maddie Dunbar, Keller High School
- Noah Gordon, Azle High School
- Ashley Her, Timber Creek High School
- Emily Kemp, Weatherford High School
- Olivia Key, Aledo High School
- Lindsey Martin, Central High School

Clays for Kole

Family keeps son's memory alive, funds scholarships with clay shoot

BY BOB BUCKEL,
COMMUNICATIONS AND MEDIA
REPRESENTATIVE

PHOTO: A shooter takes aim during April's "5-Stand and Flush" event south of Goree. The shoot is one of several that help raise funds for scholarships throughout the year.

THE APRIL MORNING AIR was crisp and clean, and the mesquites were just starting to green up. It was cold enough that a jacket felt good, but the sun was bright. Thanks to warm days and recent rain, it finally felt like spring.

Five men stood spread out in a line with double-barreled shotguns at the ready, gazing intently across a sloping pasture toward a stand of trees. Seven traps, powered by car batteries and connected to a controller on the table behind them, were scattered around the pasture, clay targets stacked in trays atop the spring-loaded mechanism that flung them straight up, or out, at various angles, to the left or the right.

The young man in the third stand shouldered his gun, squinted and spoke.

"One and six... Pull!" There was a quick "swish" and a target flew straight up. He raised the shotgun, following its flight. BOOM! The target exploded.

In the next instant, there was another "swish" and he swiveled, picking out the second target, frisbeeing low and fast, left to right.

"Rabbit!" someone yelled. BOOM! It exploded, too.

"Nice shooting, Ed," another shooter said. "You're in the money!" He broke the gun, removed the spent shells and tossed them into a barrel, grinning. The man next to him raised his shotgun, peering through the frame, and got ready for his turn.

Kole Gray would have been here. This was his element, his people. He was a good shooter, an excellent welder, a wonderful husband and son and brother. He was passionate about playing guitar and writing music, hunting, fishing and drawing. He loved farming, loved his family, loved Katie, loved life.

In May of 2013, they'd been living in Sunray, an hour north of Amarillo, for less than a year. He was working for a big farming operation, maintaining the center-pivot irrigation systems that create those green circles in the landscape. One night, he got called out late to go check on a system. It wouldn't take long, so Katie jumped in the pickup and rode with him. 24084001

On the way back, they drove up on several horses standing across the dark road. He swerved to dodge them, and the pickup rolled. Katie survived, but Kole was thrown out and lost his life. He was 24.

“He was the best guy ever. Best Heart.”

—KAREN GRAY

“He was the best guy ever,” his mother said. “Best heart.”

Kole’s parents, Terry and Karen Gray, both grew up in Goree, just a few miles east of Munday in Tri-County Electric Cooperative’s Seymour service territory. Terry works at the water treatment plant at Miller’s Creek Lake, and on his days off, he and Karen do carpentry and remodeling work. They were high school sweethearts and married young – 34 years ago.

They have three children: Kayla, Kole and Tanya, along with five grandchildren, ranging in age from 13 to 3, and a host of family and friends. It’s a big, close family and they love them all – but they miss their son.

Holding a clay shoot every June helps keep Kole’s memory alive.

A Family Affair

Clay shooting has been a part of the Gray family’s life since their children were little. They used to go every year to an event held in Llano by Brenda and Claude Rister, Karen’s sister and her husband.

“They have a lot of manual traps down there,” Terry said. “He would hire our kids to sit there all day and run the traps.”

When Terry and Karen started the Big Country Shoot, the year after Kole’s death, Claude and Brenda helped them set everything up. Since then, they’ve upgraded the equipment every year, and a friend from Wichita Falls helped them automate the process. Karen’s brother Nathan helps put on the event, and lots of family members pitch in.

The shoot, along with a silent auction of donated items, provides scholarships for graduating seniors at Seymour, Munday, Haskell and Knox City. Tri-County Electric Cooperative has been a sponsor and supporter from the beginning. 800829533

“Royce [Wood, Seymour office services supervisor] comes up with all kinds of stuff from the co-op,” Terry said. “We’ve had lots of support from all the surrounding towns.”

At their previous location, they had to work around hunters and could hold only one event a year. Last year, a piece of land just south of Goree became available where they could shoot year-round. They held the 2020 Big Country Shoot there, then followed with a fire department fundraiser in the fall and the

"5-Stand and Flush" event April 17.

By this June, they will have Tri-County Electric Co-op power at the site.

Phil Loftin, Munday crew chief who retired in January after 29 years with the co-op, makes the trophies for each year's clay shoot at no charge, as his gift to the family. A skilled woodworker, he uses a computer-guided router to carve Kole's name and distinctive "KG" logo into a wood disk shaped like a clay target.

Kole designed that logo, Terry said, and "put it on everything he owned."

One thing is certain: it's permanently etched on a lot of hearts. ■

I Work for You

ROYCE WOODS

Right-of-Way Supervisor
Business Development & ROW

Royce Woods, who grew up and graduated high school in Seymour, celebrated his 20th anniversary with Tri-County Electric Co-op in March. Over the past two decades, he has become a familiar face – and a trusted set of ears – to the co-op's members while wearing several different hats.

"I like helping people. You can't always do what they want, but most of the time they just want to tell you their side of the story. They want to be heard, and I can listen."

He started as a groundhand and worked his way up to second-class lineman. He worked on the service truck and read meters before moving inside about 10 years ago. He oversaw inventory, took payments, set up service and assisted with work orders – while continuing to cover trouble calls.

For the last several years, he has been the face of the co-op as it supports community causes. Recently, he started working in right-of-way and now spends a lot of time on the road, checking on tree-trimming operations across the Azle, Granbury and Seymour districts. 800627191

Woods has coached youth sports, served on the livestock board, the rodeo association and the volunteer fire department. In May, he won his fourth term on the Seymour school board. He likes to fish and bird hunt – but most of his spare time is spent chasing grandkids' activities like soccer and tee-ball.

Royce and wife Connie have six children – his two boys and her four girls – and four grandsons, with another one on the way. ■

"The co-op's been good for my family," he said. "I'm glad I'm still learning new things, every day."

Waka Molay Salad

BY RACHEL BATES
WEATHERFORD

- 4 slightly firm avocados
- ½ sweet onion, diced small
- 1 clove of garlic, diced
- Grape tomatoes, diced
- 1 bunch of fresh cilantro
- 1 lime, juiced
- Cayenne – optional
- Jalapeno, finely chopped – optional

1. Dice avocados in large chunks and place in a bowl. Add the diced onion, garlic, tomatoes, ¼ cup chopped cilantro and lime juice.
2. Add in cayenne for a kick or chopped jalapeno, both are optional depending on your taste.
3. Mix loosely for a chunky texture, or mix to squish together for a creamy texture.

Enjoy!

COOKING TIP: Celebrate National Fresh Fruit and Vegetable month by shopping at the local farmer’s market or harvesting from your garden.

Behind the Recipe

Rachel Bates received her Meemaw’s recipe box containing numerous hand-written recipies. Bates wrote in her recipe submission form that her Meemaw would write recipes down as she heard them.

“Many of these treasures are written in her hand, with her own phonetic way of spelling,” she wrote. “As someone gave her the instructions verbally, she wrote what she heard.”

Bates shared that one of her favorite recipies from grandma’s treasure box is the guacamole recipe – or as Meemaw calls it, Waka Molay Salad!

TEXAS MINT

We are excited to announce the release of the 2021 Texas Silver Round – Revolution Series. This is the second release of a four-year series commemorating the battles of the Texas Revolution. Each Texas Silver Round is one troy ounce .9999 fine silver.

The obverse of the high-quality mint strike features Texas' iconic lone star in the foreground. The smooth engraving of the star is framed by a textured topographical outline of the state of Texas. "TEXAS" arches proudly over the top of the round's obverse in large capital letters, with "Precious Metals" presented inversely along the opposite side. The round's mintage year is engraved in the bottom left of the round, just southwest of what would be the Rio Grande bordering Texas and Mexico.

The reverse of the 2021 release displays a scene from the famous Battle of the Alamo. It depicts two Texian soldiers including the American icon, Davy Crockett, attempting to fend off Mexican soldiers attempting to breach the walls of the Alamo.

BATTLE OF GONZALES

first in the series ● ● ● ●

The stunning 2020 Texas Silver Round depicts a scene from the Battle of Gonzales, with three Texian revolutionaries defending the famous Gonzales cannon, while brandishing the Come And Take It Flag.

BATTLE OF THE ALAMO

second in the series ● ● ● ●

The events of this famous battle took place on the days of February 23rd - March 6th, 1836. At the end of a 13-day siege, President General Antonio López de Santa Anna and his Mexican troops reclaimed the Alamo Mission, killing the Texian and immigrant occupiers.

The Texas Silver Round can be purchased in a monster box produced exclusively for the Texas Mint. Packaged in 20 protective tubes of 25 rounds each, the monster box holds 500 1-ounce Texas Silver Rounds. Built from durable cold-rolled steel and finished with a matte black powder coat, the monster box lid features an orange cutout of the state of Texas. Each sealed monster box is secured with a unique serial number and a holographic seal to ensure maximum product protection.

The Texas Silver Round is also available to purchase in a similarly designed and secured mini-monster box, which contains 10 protective tubes of 25 rounds each for a total of 250 silver rounds.

See Gigi Coleman's performance as Bessie Coleman.

Back in the U.S. a year later, she became the first Black woman to perform in an air show. She toured the country making speeches, executing tricks, stunting like a daredevil and working as an activist against discrimination. Coleman, nicknamed Queen Bess, had a reputation for refusing to perform for segregated audiences. Using money she earned from barnstorming, she purchased her own plane, a Curtiss JN-4.

Tragedy struck during a test flight April 30, 1926, over Florida, when a loose wrench jammed the control gears and flipped the plane upside down. She wasn't wearing her seat belt, and the plane had no canopy. Coleman, 34, fell to her death.

Black newspapers gave her death front-page coverage, but the mainstream press barely noted it. In 2019, The New York Times, as part of an effort to recognize the lives of remarkable people whose deaths went unreported at the time, ran a complete obituary. "Coleman saw aviation as a way to empower Black people in America and dreamed of opening a flight school," it wrote. "Future pilots said they had been inspired by her, and flight clubs have been named in her honor."

The Challenger Air Pilots Association of Chicago began an annual tradition of flying over Coleman's grave there in 1931. The U.S. Postal Service issued a stamp in her honor in 1995 after Marion Coleman, Bessie's niece, persistently petitioned for it. Texas historical markers stand in Atlanta and Waxahachie, Bessie's former hometowns.

A great-niece, Gigi Coleman, portrays Bessie Coleman in a one-woman show that she performs around the country.

"When I do my performance, people cry," Gigi Coleman says. "I'm very proud to be a relative of hers. She was a trail-blazer, and she didn't take no for an answer." ■

Queen Bess Soared

Bessie Coleman slipped from the grips of gravity and Jim Crow to become the first African American female pilot and first Native American female pilot

BY AINSLEY SHAW

JIM CROW SEGREGATION laws seemed to have a grasp like gravity on Bessie Coleman—as they did for most African Americans in the early 20th century—keeping her from rising very high in life.

Coleman, born in 1892 in Atlanta, Texas, to an African American maid and a Native American sharecropper, spent her youth picking cotton. She likely never dreamed she would go on to become the first African American woman and first Native American woman to earn a pilot's license—two years before Amelia Earhart earned hers—100 years ago.

When she was 23, Coleman moved in with two of her brothers and found work as a manicurist in Chicago. Her brother John, who served in Europe during World War I, drunkenly teased her one day about the wider range of opportunities for women in France. He told her, "Women ain't never goin' to fly, not like those women I saw in France," according to Queen Bess: Daredevil Aviator, a biography by Doris L. Rich.

Coleman took that as a challenge and responded, "That's it! You just called it for me." She decided to head to France, where she would face fewer obstacles for being Black and a woman.

After spending her nights learning French and days managing a chili restaurant, Coleman sailed to France and found a pilot to train her. Seven months later, she earned her pilot's license from the Fédération Aéronautique Internationale, on June 15, 1921.

Tomatoes

Sliced is nice, but you can also bake them into saucy desserts

BY MEGAN MYERS, FOOD EDITOR

For years I avoided eating tomatoes in anything but pasta sauce or pizza. Thankfully those days are behind me, and now I look forward to when my garden starts producing piles of cherry tomatoes and sandwich-ready slicers. This cake helps use up any extra tomatoes you might have on hand—and gets kids to eat them. This recipe was one of the first to appear on soup cans, and this iteration's use of fresh tomatoes only improves it. Filled with spices and wonderfully moist, it will become a summer staple.

Tomato Cake

CAKE

1 pound tomatoes, or more as needed to yield 2 cups plus 2 tablespoons purée, divided use

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground cardamom
½ teaspoon ground ginger
½ cup packed brown sugar
½ cup sugar
¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter, softened
2 eggs

GLAZE

1½ cups powdered sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Reserved tomato purée

- 1. CAKE Preheat oven to 350 degrees and coat a 10-cup Bundt pan with cooking spray.
- 2. Core and quarter tomatoes. Purée in a blender or food processor until completely smooth. Measure out 2 cups and set aside, reserving remainder.
- 3. In a large bowl, sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, cardamom and ginger.
- 4. In another bowl, beat sugars and butter until the batter is creamed and fluffy. Beat in eggs one at a time.
- 5. Alternate adding flour mixture and tomato purée to the batter, starting and ending with the flour. Incorporate fully before each addition.
- 6. Pour batter into the prepared pan and bake 40 minutes, or until a toothpick comes out clean.
- 7. Let cake cool in pan 10 minutes, then invert onto a rack to cool completely.
- 8. GLAZE Mix powdered sugar, vanilla and 2 tablespoons tomato purée until completely smooth. Add more sugar or liquid as necessary. Drizzle over cooled cake.

Broiled Stuffed Tomatoes

JOYCELYN SKIDMORE
LAMAR ELECTRIC

The ideal starter for any summer dinner, these stuffed tomatoes are ready in a flash. If you have one handy, a melon baller makes easy work of removing tomato seeds.

- 4–6 tomatoes
- ½ cup breadcrumbs
- ¼ cup chopped fresh basil or parsley
- 3 tablespoons minced green onion
- 1–2 cloves garlic, minced
- ¼ teaspoon salt, plus more for sprinkling
- ¼ teaspoon pepper, plus more for sprinkling
- ⅛ teaspoon dried thyme
- ¼ cup olive oil, plus more for drizzling

1. Core tomatoes. Using a spoon, scoop out seeds and juice, taking care not to break the sides of the tomatoes. Set tomatoes upside down in a colander to drain.
2. In a small bowl, combine breadcrumbs, basil or parsley, green onion, garlic, salt, pepper, and thyme. Stir in olive oil until mixture is well combined and looks like wet sand.
3. Sprinkle salt and pepper into each tomato. Fill tomatoes with breadcrumb mixture and set on a rimmed baking sheet. Drizzle with additional olive oil. Broil at 400 degrees 5–10 minutes, keeping an eye on the breadcrumbs so they don't burn.

Tangy Tomato Slices

DALA BURK
WISE EC

This simple yet flavorful dish brings back summer memories for Burk, who has been enjoying this recipe for 40 years. Enjoy the slices on their own or tucked into a warm biscuit for a best-ever tomato sandwich.

SERVES 6

- 6 tomatoes, thinly sliced
- 1 onion, thinly sliced
- 1 cup olive oil
- ⅓ cup vinegar
- ¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
- 3 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon garlic powder

1. Layer tomato and onion slices in a 9-by-13-inch baking dish and set aside.
2. In a small bowl, whisk together remaining ingredients. Pour over tomatoes and onion, using a spatula to spread herbs evenly. Cover and chill 4–5 hours before serving.

Savory Tomato Bread Pudding

VALERIE KRUSE
TRI-COUNTY EC

This dish is ideal for using up day-old bread. Since the tomatoes cook down, feel free to use not-so-perfect ones.

- 8 tablespoons olive oil, divided use
- 1 large baguette, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 3 cloves garlic, chopped
- 3 pounds tomatoes, cored and cut into chunks
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup grated Parmesan, Asiago

or Romano cheese
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
(optional)

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly coat a large casserole dish with cooking spray and set aside. Heat 6 tablespoons olive oil in a large skillet over medium heat. Add the bread cubes and stir to coat. Sauté about 5 minutes or until bread is lightly browned and toasted, working in batches if needed. Transfer to a large bowl.
2. Add remaining olive oil to the skillet and cook the garlic 30 seconds. Add tomatoes, sugar, salt and pepper and stir well. Cook until tomatoes have released their juices and are submerged, about 10 minutes.
3. Add tomato mixture to bread cubes. Stir well to combine. Pour mixture into casserole dish and top with cheese.
4. Bake 40–45 minutes, loosening the edges with a spatula after 30 minutes to allow juices to distribute. Remove from oven and let rest 15 minutes, then sprinkle with chopped basil and serve.

Tasty Tomato Types

BY MEGAN MYERS

While there are more than 10,000 varieties of tomatoes, most of us return to our tried-and-true favorites when cooking.

Globe

Alongside beefsteak tomatoes, this round, firm and juicy variety is what you'll most likely find at the super-market. They're delicious raw and cooked, and their shape makes them suitable for stuffing.

Roma

Roma and plum tomatoes are oblong and most commonly used for sauces thanks to their lower water content.

Cherry and Grape

These bite-size tomatoes are perfect raw for salads but also are delicious sautéed or roasted with herbs. Sweet varieties are a hit with kids, making them a great healthy snack.

COURTESY CHET GARNER

Deep Dip

Wimberley's seemingly bottomless Jacob's Well invites a plunge

BY CHET GARNER

STANDING ON A limestone ledge and staring into Texas' strangest swimming hole, I remembered my mother's warning, "Don't jump unless you know what's underneath you." I wasn't completely sure what was beneath the surface, but with a crowd of cheering onlookers, chickening out was not an option. I held my breath and braced for the unknown.

This is the thrill of Jacob's Well, a spring-fed swimming hole near Wimberley that's been attracting visitors for centuries. The hole itself measures less than 20 feet across but looks like it plummets to the center of the Earth. In reality, it descends into a series of caverns that extend a mile back into the Earth. Every minute of every day, the Edwards Aquifer pushes a river of fresh water out of the cave and feeds Cypress Creek.

As I completed the plunge, my only thought was, "Wow! That's cold." The spring water holds at a chilly 68 degrees year-round. Once I regained my composure, I could appreciate the fact that I was floating above what seemed like a bottomless pit of water. I had to see what was down there.

I grabbed my goggles, pointed my head toward the bottom and started kicking. I could feel the mass of water pushing against me with its invisible current, and the water was so clear that I could see every detail of the algae-covered walls and the ledge 25 feet down. With every bit of strength and air that I had, I propelled myself to the stone shelf and from there could see the small opening to the deeper and darker caves.

That was enough to freak me out, so I quickly turned and swam to the sunshine and safety of the surface. It was time for another jump. ■

Parent Imperfect

Love outdistances cool
in appreciation of a good father

BY MARTHA DEERING
ILLUSTRATION BY KEVIN FALES

WHAT AWFUL AFFLICTION is it that makes preteens view their parents' idiosyncrasies through a monstrous magnifying glass?

I cringe to admit this, but in middle school I was embarrassed by my father. Born with cataracts after his mother contracted German measles, he wore Coke-bottle glasses and walked with an exaggerated high-stepping gait to avoid tripping over things. Worse, he couldn't drive like other dads. Surgery improved his vision slightly, but he was still considered legally blind.

Perhaps that was why music was so important to him; being deprived of one of his senses had sharpened another.

When my friends came over, I engineered excuses to avoid my father. He told the awfulest jokes: "What did the mayonnaise say to the icebox? Close the door, I'm dressing." In my adolescent imagination, my friends were laughing at him, not with him.

"Your father is playing with the orchestra tomorrow night at Baylor before freshman orientation," my mother explained one night. "It's the same night as my writing class. Could you walk over there with him?"

As we crossed a busy street in the dark, my father tripped over the curb and fell forward onto his chest. His battered violin case landed with a clatter on the sidewalk along with his glasses, which suffered a spiderweb of cracks across one lens. Horrified by my inattention, I helped him up and brushed off the front of his suit coat.

"Are you all right?" I asked. "Do you want to go home? You won't be able to see the music with your glasses smashed."

"No, I can't go home," he said, checking his 200-year-old violin for damage. "They can't play the violin parts without me. I can't see the music unless I'm up close anyway, so I always memorize my parts. If you'll help me get set up on the stage, I'll be OK. Why am I so clumsy?"

Years later in high school, I began to recognize the courage it took for this gentle, loving man with a disability (he hated the designation "handicapped") to get a doctorate and then a job just after the Depression; to play Mozart, Bach and Beethoven in front of large crowds; to teach psychology to classes of graduate students; to lead brain exercise groups at local nursing homes; and to raise three children, willingly wearing out the knees of his suit pants to play the part of the horse to our cowboys and Indians.

I'm sure that my father recognized and forgave my adolescent foolishness. He was that kind of guy. ■
